

Ethical Dilemma Role Play Slips

Scenario 1 Signing a Petition	Scenario 2 Propaganda/Misinformation	Scenario 3 Organ Harvesting Concerns
Role Apple 1: Having signed many petitions on humanitarian issues and finding that nothing changed despite her efforts, Apple feels dejected and refuses to sign petitions anymore. Although she sympathizes with the victims, Apple believes that signing petitions is hopeless and useless.	Role Apple 2: Apple grew up in China and learned in school that Falun Gong practitioners are a bad influence to society. She also learned from the news that practitioners commit suicide and harm those around them. She believes that the CCP's persecution of practitioners is just because it's for the greater good of the country and its people.	Role Apple 3: Apple recently found out that her beloved uncle has kidney cancer and needs a kidney transplant. However, the median wait time in British Columbia is 5.5 years. Yesterday, a friend informed Apple that the wait time in China is less than a week and encouraged Apple to have her uncle get his kidney transplant in China. Apple has booked two plane tickets to China, leaving in three weeks, for her uncle and herself.
Role Orange 1: After learning about the persecution of Falun Gong practitioners in China, Orange volunteered to collect signatures for a petition to the Canadian government, requesting that the government put an end to the persecution of practitioners in China.	Role Orange 2: Orange's best friend is a Falun Gong practitioner and she supports her friend's practice. Orange is classmates with Apple and has just learned that Apple supports the CCP's persecution of Falun Gong practitioners.	Role Orange 3: Orange recently learned about the persecution of Falun Gong in China and about the organ harvesting that is happening there. In class today, Apple told Orange that she plans to go to China with her uncle for her uncle's kidney transplant.
